MA in History

The University College Cork Masters in History is a 12-month programme (24-months part-time).

It offers unique flexibility and diversity: four separate streams, eighteen modules, plus optional work placement and optional Latin language course. Streams range from Medieval and Renaissance History to Modern Ireland or Media and History or International and European History.

You select from diverse topics, such as revolution and regime change, collective memory and commemoration, cultural heritage, the medieval world, Ireland's relationships and encounters with the wider world, identity, nationalism, the evolution of healthcare, radicalism and social unrest, the historical uses and applications of modern media, war and peace, booms and busts since the dawn of modern finance, contemporary history, US foreign relations or feminist history.

Students have the opportunity to:

- Examine the relationship between collective memory and identity and history
- Critically appreciate the manipulation, uses and abuses of history
- Investigate how history graduates contribute to numerous work environments
- Interrogate old and new ways of doing history

Why Choose this Course?

- The UCC MA in History offers a thoughtful and inventive mix of Irish and international subject material which will provoke and challenge you.
- Our internationally-respected faculty team will mentor you throughout the degree.
- The MA in History provides the option of a work placement with a relevant host in heritage sector to apply and enhance your skills.
- UCC History will equip you with a sophisticated appreciation of history and its applications.

Skills & Career Paths

- The course will equip you with the essential skills that enable you to understand and interpret the history and culture (written and visual) of the past.
- It will introduce new and innovative methodologies that bring fresh insights into the past, and that allow you to reconstruct in detail how people understood their world, and how they lived their lives.
- There are modules that explore and apply research methods, and also modules that train you in how these methods and skills can be used by graduates in their employment.
- An essential part of the MA is instruction and experience in applied skills that allow you to create and publish your research online, and to develop your expertise in public history. The MA will guide you in developing your ability to engage with that wide audience through training in presenting your ideas both orally and in writing.
- Our graduates choose academic and non-academic career paths. They pursue doctoral study with scholarship support, work as university lecturers and teachers, are employed in the heritage sector, the media, financial services and public administration.
